Summer 2010

Travessia is growing

Hello everyone!

This Spring Travessia released four new wines... our first Pinot Grigio, an UnOaked Chardonnay, the Bastard Rose' and the Vidal Blanc, all wines from a new vintage (2008). I'm mostly excited about the Pinot Grigio... the wine was a bit too tart when we bottled it, but after six months of bottle aging it developed into a delicious wine. Need I say again that all these newly released Travessia wines are not only locally made, but more importantly 100% locally grown? Yeap... they are.

Travessia's wines can now also be found at two distinct locations in Massachusetts. Quicks Whole restaurant in Woods Whole and soon to be open The Reserve Bin wine shop in Foxboro. We are excited to have our wines at both of these locations. Quicks Whole and The Reserve Bin are perfect examples of places owned and managed by people we want to be associated with. Small businesses who care for food and wine and who understand the positive aspects of supporting a local winery.

What's coming up?

Stacy Woods, wine educator at Boston University's Elizabeth Bishop School of Wine Studies and Certified Specialist in Wine, will be leading an one-hour seminar on "Wine Sensory Evaluation" at Travessia. The seminar takes place June 27th between 11AM and Noon. Tickets must be purchased in advance by calling the winery during normal business hours. $15 for Travessia Wine Club Members, $20 for non-members. Only 20 seats available, so please call soon if you want to attend.

Late Summer we'll be releasing a new red wine... the "Jester", which is a blend of mostly Zinfandel and Cabernet Sauvignon. The "Jester" joins the "Trapeze" in a category of wines that we label differently since they are not locally grown. A few of our wine club members had an opportunity to taste a barrel sample of the "Jester" back in March and the response was extremely positive.

Wishing you a great Summer,
Marco Montez - Owner & Winemaker
